

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An apparatus and method for sending bowling scoring information associated with identification information to an internet-accessible data base is disclosed. The apparatus and method permit at least a version of some of the scoring information associated with the identification information to be passed to the data base via the internet without manually inputting the information into a computer.